xLM, LLC, the first managed service provider for delivering continuously validated cloud apps, today announced a partnership with Inflectra, a provider of software development and testing tools. This partnership combines Inflectra’s ALM Apps with xLM’s Continuous Validation service that enables delivery of “validated” apps.

With this partnership, Inflectra can deliver their cloud-based apps as “validated” apps that meet FDA’s 21 CFR Part 11 as well as predicate regulations. xLM’s Continuous Validation Service handles all validation tasks from initial validation, upgrade/patch validation, new release validation and subsequent “continuous” validation. With xLM’s service, customers can view the “validation dashboard” of their instance in real-time.

“This partnership brings cost efficient validation that will also save time,” said Adam Sandman, Director of Technology at Inflectra. “Our customers will have access to all our apps that are delivered “validated” with real-time access to its “validation health”. Now our customers will be able to focus on using our apps while xLM’s service handles all the validation tasks leveraging their continuous validation platform.”

“Continuous validation is providing documented evidence to certify that any Inflectra app not only met the pre-established acceptance criteria but “continuous” to meet thus mitigating the risk of unknown changes.” said Nagesh Nama, Chief Quality Officer (CQO) of xLM, LLC.
